Tea on the Hill

DON'T MIND IF I DO...

Afternoon tea is a beautiful ritual. A celebration of tea and its theatre, accompanied by delicate, charming treats of sandwiches, pastries and cakes. All presented and created to excite the taste buds and gladden the eye.

It is said that this ceremony began once upon a time during the early nineteenth century, when it was more usual to consume only breakfast and an evening dinner each day.

The 7th Duchess of Bedford experienced some feelings of weariness during the mid-afternoon, and so would partake of a light snack and a pot of tea.

She began inviting friends to join her and was usually held in the drawing room, it became very fashionable and over time quite an elaborate affair, deemed a serious social engagement and the perfect solution to the mid-afternoon slump. In fact the Countess of Mansfield, a former resident of Richmond Hill Hotel, was also known to frequent in afternoon tea in the original Georgian manor house during her time spent here in the late 1800's.

Long may this wonderful tradition continue and so we welcome you to indulge in a wonderful afternoon tea on the hill.
